Art Unit: 2181

1. Claims 1- 28 remain for examination.

2. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

— The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

3. Claims 1-28 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Claims 1, 7, 12, 19, and 24, it is not clear what is meant by “steering each of the set of instructions into an instruction cache according to a particular one of a set of execution units (or clusters)”.

4. Claims 1-12, 14-24, and 26-28 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Sheaffer et al, U.S. patent No. 5,790,822, cited in the previous office action.

5. Claims 1, 2, 7, 8, 12, 19, 20, and 24 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Branigin, U.S. patent No. 5,471,593, cited in the previous office action.

6. The rejections are respectfully maintained for the reasons set forth in the previous office action, for the added limitations of issuing instructions to particular execution units or clusters is evident in the references as all instructions are issued to appropriate execution units for execution.

Art Unit: 2181

7. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

8. Claims 12-18 and 24-28 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Lipasti, U.S. patent No. 6,219,780, cited in the previous office action.

Lipasti teaches the invention as claimed in claim 12 including a method of executing a set of instructions in a processor, comprising:

(a) decoding the set of instructions (70),

(b) steering for a first time each of a set of instructions into an instruction cache (62; col. 7, line 2) according to particular one of a set of execution unit clusters (46) that the instruction requires,

(c) issuing each of the set of instructions from said instruction cache to a particular one of said set of execution unit clusters (col. 7, line 23), and further teaches as in claims 13-18,

(d) storing each of the set of instructions into a set of bins (fig. 3, 62) in the instruction cache – claim 13,

(e) renaming a set of register (76; col. 7, line 36) of a particular one of the set of instructions prior to steering) – claim 14,

Art Unit: 2181

- (f) scheduling a particular one of the set of instructions if found in the instruction cache (col. 7, line 23) – claim 15,
- (g) steering for the second time into one of a set of execution units and executing (44) – claims 16 and 17, and
- (h) fetching an instruction from memory if not found in the instruction cache (all instructions are fetched from memory before being stored in the instruction cache) – claim 18.

The processor claims 24-28 with steering done using crossbar are equivalently ejected based on the same reason (use of a crossbar to steer multiple locations to multiple locations is well known in the art).

9. Applicant's arguments filed May 9, 2003 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant argued that "Scheaffer" does not teach steering instructions into instruction cache bins according to a particular one of or cluster of execution unit but teaches steering into the instruction cache so as to space instructions for the execution units.

Not all claims recite instruction cache bins and the reference teaches not only spacing instructions based on data dependencies but also steering instructions into instruction cache bins according to a particular one of execution units (execution resources). The reference states, referring to Fig. 4,

"A first selection logic 415 channels the instructions from input buffer 410 to separate resource bins 422-426 based on the execution resources needed by the individual instruction. Once the instructions are channel into the resource bins 422-426, a second selection logic 428 takes the instructions out of the bins based on data dependencies. During each clock cycle an instruction is taken from each bin in accordance with the second selection logic and sent to shift register 430 for assembling cache lines in the re-ordered instruction cache 136." (col. 6, lines 9-18).

Applicant also argued that "Branigin" does not teach scheduling of instructions to avoid pipeline stall before steering them into an instruction cache.

The reference teaches the scheduling of instructions to avoid pipeline stall by scheduling instructions for out-of-order execution (col. 7, line 12) before steering them into the reservation stations constituting the instruction cache.

From the descriptions in the specification, it is not clear what distinguishes the instruction cache from the reservation station of the reference, particularly when the instruction cache is used after the renaming stage. The instruction cache bins appears to be a mere extension of the reservation station in the specification (in figs. 2 and 7) and behave exactly like reservation stations (in figs. 4, 5, and 9).
